

A STAND FOR THE SPOILS SYSTEM.

The effort to pass the bill to repeal the act which limits the term of postmaster, marshal, district attorney, collector and other officials of the United States to four years, was directly in the line of civil service reform. It was a proposition to check the spoils system by making the practice of it less easy. Removal of the limitation as to the term of office would put out of the way the one controversial transaction to use places in the public service to reward partisan activity. Persons holding offices under the government would continue in possession of them so long as they should if they change their duties to the satisfaction of the people and their official superiors.

But that is not the kind of civil service reform the democrats are "hunting for." That they want is a clean sweep of all of the civil service from present down. They do not wish to be hampered by regulations of a party which is not their own, and so far as their power they will prevent any legislation which would possibly keep a republican in office or demand one, no matter what the consequences may be to the public, or what the effect may be upon the politics of the country.

IOWA'S PROHIBITORY LAW.

The new prohibitory liquor law of Iowa is the most stringent measure of the kind ever enacted. Penalties for violation of it are increased to cover every case that can be made out, and the law has therefore been made in the highest degree ineffectual. For the first offense the penalty is a fine of $200, or imprisonment in the county jail for six months, and for the second and every subsequent offense a fine of not less than $500 nor more than $1000 and imprisonment in the county jail for one year. The law is so framed that it is sufficient to support conviction. The building in which such liquors are sold is declared a nuisance, and any citizen of the county in which such nuisance exists may sue to have it removed. The owner or keeper of such a nuisance shall be fined not less than $500 nor more than $1000. By a former law a druggist may sell such liquors for medicinal, medicinal, ordinary and sacramental purposes, by giving a bond with adequate conditions. This bond is now increased to $5000, and no railway company, express company or common carrier is allowed to bring into the state any such liquors without a certificate of the county auditor that the consignee holds such permit. A violation of this section subjects the offender to a fine not exceeding $1000, or to imprisonment in the county jail for six months, or to both the punishment and sale of any kind of intoxicating liquors, including ale, wine and beer. It takes effect July 1. It may be possible to secure partial enforcement of this law in Iowa, but any serious attempt to enforce such an one in Oregon would overthrow local government.

A SIGNIFICANT MOVEMENT.

The New York Times pronounces the tariff reform movement in Massachusetts, of which several notices have appeared in our columns, "the beginning of the end of the policy of protection in the United States." In proportion to her population Massachusetts is the producer of our manufacturing states. Till recently she has been foremost in her championing of "protection." That so great a body of her representative men of all parties should now call for "decisive action looking to the ultimate abandonment of the policy of tariff reform, not for revenue, but for the purpose of obstructing trade," is one of the most significant incidents of the time. This is the policy which is surely destined to prevail at no distant day. Nothing can stay its progress. Responding to the growth of public sentiment in Massachusetts, the republican convention recently held in that state adopted a resolution insisting upon reduction of customs duties. The democratic party, by the action of its representatives in congress, has shown that it cannot be depended upon to take up this reform. It is paralyzed by its fear of a temporary defeat. The republican party must take the advance step, and it must have the majority to take it in time. They are the wisest republicans who look forward to the position which the party must occupy five years hence, or cease to exist as a real political force in controlling the destinies of the country.

Edward Johnson has an article in the current number of the Popular Science Monthly on the effect of the prohibitory liquor law in Vermont. The law has been on the statute books for thirty years, and Mr. Johnson asserts that for all practical purposes it is "an absolute dead letter." The annual tax on the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors is $14,000, and although the population is nearly stationary the number of places where such liquors are sold increased last year nearly 5 per cent. There is no attempt to enforce the law. The liquor traffic is the largest element of the illegal traffic. "In the largest measure," says Mr. Johnson, "the law is a complete failure, and the only reason it has not been repealed is because it is a source of revenue to the state." The question is whether he makes this view valid by so to his own interests, or as a messenger of good tidings from some "honest" committee or candidate. It may not be known to many of the present inhabitants of Oregon that Mr. Starr, twenty-two years ago, was for a short time a senator in congress from this state. He was a republican, and was appointed by Governor Whitaker to succeed Baker, who fell at Bull's Bluff in October, 1861, and held the position till the legislature of 1862 elected his successor. He was not noted in the senate except for making Oregon appear, so far as his abilities would allow, to be in sympathy with the rebellion.

Excursion tickets to Chicago during the republican convention to be held at that city commencing June 8 will be sold by the railroad companies entering there, at the rate of first-class fares, but only one way, for the round trip. But tickets of admission to the exposition building will be hard to obtain. Each delegate will have only seven tickets, and "outsiders" will have to apply to those delegates for the necessary passes. Regular members of the press, actually reporting the proceedings, will have the customary facilities. Chicago people who subscribe to the fund of $200, beginning May 1st, will be entitled to 1000 necessary to pay the local expenses, will be furnished with tickets according to the amount of their subscriptions. The "relating states"

ENGLAND.

MR. STURGEON'S SPEECH.—There is great excitement in London because of the speech made by Mr. Sturgeon at the meeting of the Anti-Slavery Society on Monday evening last. He spoke for an hour and a half, and his speech was one of the most powerful and eloquent ever made in England. He spoke of the condition of the world, and of the progress of civilization, and of the duty of the individual citizen. He spoke of the rights of the colored people, and of the wrongs done to them. He spoke of the need of a more just and equitable system of government, and of the need of a more active and energetic people. His speech was received with great applause, and it was one of the most successful of his career.
